News Release

July 31, 2020

The Japan Times, Ltd.

The Japan Times implements a new print viewer and released “ePaper Edition”, a newspaper you can read anytime, anywhere.

The Japan Times, Ltd. (Head Office: Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo; Chairperson and publisher: Minako Suematsu) will launch the ePaper Edition print viewer service as one of the benefits of the Japan Times Digital Full Plan, which is currently being offered. The aim of this is to make the newspaper more convenient to use. It will be launched on August 1.

ePaper Edition combines the advantages of the digital and paper newspapers, leading you to read the day's news in its entirety on your PC as well as on your smartphone or tablet, making it easy to check the day's news as if you were carrying a newspaper.

You can read the news like it's a traditional newspaper. It's visually captivating, informative and you'll come across articles that you may not have thought of or expected. It is a great opportunity to reaffirm the importance of the newspaper's existence, and to use it as a daily source of information.
